DEAR READERS:

We had a substitute newsletter editor this month so the layout is different than what you would typically see. Never fear, our regular (much better) editor will be back for the January-February edition!

From the Desk of Rabbi Asch

After a September full of holidays, you might be thinking you’ve had enough! However, I hope after a few months of rest you are ready for Hannukah. While Hanukkah is known for fried foods (and more recently crazy sweaters), it is also about bringing light to a dark time of year. The sages of the Talmud, and the later commentators discuss the proper way to light the Hanukkah candles. While our custom is to light one candle (plus the shamash [helper candle]) for each night of Hanukkah, that is not the only way to light. We learn that the mitzvah of Hanukkah can be fulfilled by lighting just one candle each night of the holiday. Of course, just because that fulfills the mitzvah does not mean it is the best way to celebrate Hanukkah. We learn from Hillel that we should light one the first night all the way up to eight the second night. However, there was a concern that so many candles (especially if you do this for each person) could get confusing. So, the rabbis ruled much later that there had to be a visual recognition of which night of Hanukkah it is; in other words, if you have multiple people lighting candles they have to be separated. Today, we can do that easily with our hanukkiyot. This very long discussion about how to light candles reminds us that an important part of Hanukkah is publicizing the miracle. Not only does it remind us of the miracles that happened way back when, but the miracles which happen even today. This year as you light your Hanukkah candles, take some time to reflect on the modern-day miracles you have experienced. Wishing you a Hanukkah filled with light, joy and some delicious fried food!
By Emily Bessey, Board Vice President

Since I was a young girl, I have struggled with a great affliction: Jewish guilt. Whether it came as a pointed question from my parents while I was in college, “so, Emily, where are you attending High Holiday services this year?” or as an innocent passing question from my uncle “are you keeping Passover this year?”. I have always done a great job internalizing all the guilt and judgment from whoever wanted to send some my way. More often than not, this guilt is self-imposed. There are countless ways I can pass judgment on myself harsher than any judgment from a loved one. A source of most of my self-imposed Jewish guilt stems from a little secret: I am not always the best Jewish person. I definitely attend way more TBE committee meetings than I do TBE services. I have not been the greatest student of the Torah. And I dread eating Matzah for a week during Passover. All of these deep dark confessions provide me with plenty of guilt material. But I have to believe, all is not lost. There is one area where I must admit I earn a Jewish gold star and maybe, just maybe it’s enough to balance out the areas in which I fall short: I make a darn good challah.

Honestly, making challah is a highlight of my week. Three strand, four strand, six strand, circular... get me some flour, yeast, oil, and eggs and I’ll turn them into a golden masterpiece. My mother made great challah, too. As a kid I loved walking into her kitchen after school, smelling the fresh baked challah. It is the coziest smell. It smells like family. It smells like my mom. Once my daughter Daisy was born, I decided I wanted to be more intentional about celebrating Shabbat on Friday nights. This was the start of my challah baking learning process. I’d get out my mom’s challah recipe- the one written in her handwriting that she had given to me when I left for college. My first few challahs were admittedly not great. Dry. Overbaked. Sometimes I’d forget to paint the egg wash on top and they would come out of the oven with a matte finish rather than looking shiny and inviting. But over the years, I honed my craft. The challahs began to be “fine”. Better than what you’d find at Hannaford, but not out-of-this-world good. And then one day it happened. My friends from college and I were discussing challah recipes and I realized something that I have had to spend a lot of time and a few therapy sessions coming to terms with. It was a shocking discovery- one that rattled me to my core, giving me waves of Jewish guilt of the worst kind. Are you ready? Okay, I’ll just say it: My mom’s challah recipe is not the best challah recipe. There. It’s out in the open and I cannot take it back.

I will never forget the day I branched out and tried some random recipe that my friend from college passed along to me. The recipe is titled “Tami’s Challah Recipe”. Do I know who Tami is? Absolutely not. Does Tami make a fantastic Challah? Yes. Yes, she does. It is light and sweet and bakes to the most gorgeous shade of light brown. Out of one batch of dough I can bake 2 loaves. It freezes beautifully. Tami’s challah is not temperamental. It is never dry. And despite the fact that the recipe is simply typed up in a word document and not lovingly handwritten by the very woman who gave me life, I love it. And I love Tami, whomever she is. I will tell you; I still carry a bit of guilt every time I pass over my mom’s recipe to pull Tami’s Challah Recipe out onto the counter. But that guilt dissipates each Friday night as I watch my kids light the candles and gently pull off a corner of the challah to say the Hamotzi, my gold star glittering in the light of the candles.

Yields 2 loaves of Challah

Combine items from Step1: yeast, sugar, and warm water (bathwater warm) in a bowl and let stand for 5 minutes. You will know your yeast is good to use if you see it bubbling and frothing. Set the yeast mixture aside. In a separate bowl, combine all the ingredients from Step 2 and knead together until your dough begins to form. When your mixture has become dough-like add the yeast mixture. Once you have added the yeast mixture to the dough, add the rest of the ingredients in Step 3 but do not add all the flour at once. You will need to judge the consistency as you add flour and you may find you need slightly less or slightly more flour than the recipe suggests. You can start with 2.5 cups of flour. Knead everything together for a few minutes until you get smooth, not sticky, dough. Add flour as needed to get the right consistency. You do not want to add too much flour as it will become heavy and hard to work with. Choose a large bowl for your dough to rise. Spray the bowl with cooking spray, place the dough in the bowl, cover with wax paper that has been sprayed, and then cover with a damp, clean towel. Place in a warm area to rise until it doubles in size. That should be approximately 2 hours. Once your dough has risen, punch the dough down removing all of the air bubbles.

Shape your challah. You can bake them immediately, or let rise again until they approximately double in size for an airier challah. Once they are ready to be baked, brush them with a beaten egg, which will give them a beautiful sheen once baked. Place them in a preheated oven at 350 degrees for about a half hour. Every oven is different, so check your challah to see if they are golden brown and sound hollow when tapped. Shabbat Shalom!

Hebrew School Update
By Rabbi Asch

We are off to a great start at Hebrew School! Based on parent conversations we have introduced a few new blocks this year.

1. We have a new value we explore every two weeks. The students get to learn about the value through stories, holidays and more!
2. We now have a “skill building” time where we teach our students skills they will need to be Jewish adults. These include how to bless and shake the lulav, how to act around the Torah, what to do when you have an aliyah, and how to do the Shabbat blessings.
3. Our combined art time has been a lot of fun. Our projects will be up around TBE soon.

I have been teaching the oldest class and we are delving into the Tanach. First, we learned what the Tanach is (hint, it has three parts!) The students have completed a Tanach scavenger hunt, reviewed the important people and events in the Torah, read and written midrashim, and discovered that each Torah portion has a haftarah that goes with it. They even did a dramatic reading of the prophets. We’ll also be exploring the writings as well as Jewish law. This month, Rich Goldman will take over the teaching of this class. It is so fun to have such an enthusiastic group of learners. They make me exited to wake up early every Sunday morning.

Covid Policy Updates

As we continue to gather in person a reminder about our Covid Protocol at Temple Beth El:

- All attendees of in person events who are 12 or over must be fully vaccinated. Note: Fully vaccinated does not include getting a booster shot. While we recommend you get those if eligible, they are not required to attend events at TBE.
- Attendees under 12 may attend big events with a negative Covid test in the last 36 hours (at home rapid tests are fine). We will clearly communicate when a negative test is needed.
- Masks will be required inside the synagogue building unless you are on the bimah leading the congregation. Please ensure that seats are spaced far apart. We’ll be opening windows to increase ventilation so bundle up!
- There will be no eating inside the Temple except for a brief Kiddush and motzi after Friday night services and Torah study. Hebrew School snacks will take place outside and distanced. We’ll be providing “grab and go” treats after Friday night services.
- We have a new “Coffee, Tea and Conversation” opportunity after Saturday morning Torah study. This is an invitation to pull up a chair outside or in our lobby, chat and enjoy a hot beverage. We’ll ask that your mask remains on between sips, but this will give us a chance to talk with one another.
- Hebrew School will move inside once the weather is colder. Hebrew School families will get an updated email with our protocols.
- Zoom will be available for almost all our Temple events. If you are sick, we ask that you stay home and participate via Zoom.

Rabbi Asch’s Sabbatical November 1st – November 28th

Rabbi Asch is on sabbatical from Nov. 1st – Nov. 28th as part of the sabbatical time included in her contract for the 2020-2021 year. TBE’s sabbatical committee will be covering regular events, meeting pastoral needs, and answering any questions. Who is in charge of what during the sabbatical:

TBE Wine Tasting and Auction
Saturday, January 29, 2022

The TBE Annual Ice Storm Wine Tasting will be held on Saturday evening, January 29, 2022, on Zoom. We will be virtually transported to gorgeous Spanish wineries as we explore wines and sherry from around Spain. As is tradition, we will have an online auction with the world-renowned auctioneer, Chuck Cohen. Raffle prizes and a wine pull will also be featured! Please see the auction donation information below; we need your creativity and generosity to make this a success!

This is an event you won’t want to miss! More details to come! SALUD!

Auction Donation Information

Please help us make this a success by donating something special. We’d like to auction 10-12 special items valued at $50 and up (please save your smaller items, art and jewelry for the 2023 in person silent auction!).

Here are some ideas:

❖ Gift cards for a special meal to go from a local restaurant
❖ Gift cards to local businesses
❖ Vacation rentals (preferably within a safe driving distance)
❖ Pandemic appropriate outdoor activities, such as a round of golf or a ski pass
❖ Extraordinary, one-of-a kind home-baked items (your very best apple pie, your grandmother’s hamantaschen, that chocolate babka!)
❖ Special Themed Baskets (for example: Made in Maine, Coffee/Tea Time, Gardening, Cookie Baking, Water Color Painting, your wonderful creation!)
❖ Sports memorabilia
❖ A beautiful handcrafted quilt
❖ Your idea!

Please send an email to Fran Rudoff at frudoff@gmail.com or call her at 207-212-9544 with your donation idea by January 7, 2022.
Share the Road with Carol

Temple members Sarah and Mike Drickey and Chuck Cohen rode in the Share the Road with Carol memorial bike ride on September 19th. The annual ride honors the memory of Dr. Carol Eckert, wife of TBE member Jeff Frankel, who was killed while bicycling near her home in Windsor in 2016. Want to ride next year? Let Jeff know!

Many, many thanks!

A huge thank you to everyone who made our high holiday celebrations possible. We could not have done it without all the people who set up, cleaned up, helped with food, served as greeters, put up and took down the sukkah, helped lead services, created the yizkor book, created our Covid protocols, brought goats to our celebration, and more.

A special thank you to our High Holiday Committee: Linda Kallin, Cree Krull, Fran Rudoff, Deb Sewall and Liz Sizeler.

They helped to envision our holidays to make this a meaningful experience online and in person. It was wonderful to see so many people in person and get to reconnect. I am so grateful to all the people who joined us online and were a part of our communal observance.
